RESILIENT LINOLEUM

At Congoleum we understand which elements are most important during the planning and manufacturing stages to create the highest quality resilient flooring. To learn more about Congoleum's strengths in manufacturing, see our manufacturing process or watch our video at learn how it's made. Today's resilient flooring is a highly engineered combination of polymer materials. This means flooring created from carefully selected natural and synthetic materials. Polymers are large molecules composed of repeating structural units, which allow for increased strength and durability for the lifetime of the product.
